Valley jolted by temblor

LIVERMORE — An earthquake epicenter six miles east of here virtually shook the entire San Francisco Bay Monday night.

According to police and fire department spokesmen, minimal damage was reported. "It just shook the plates off our table," said Officer Wes Morgan of the Livermore Police Department.

"It lasted about five seconds with one long tremor," said Morgan, whose department received numerous calls inquiring when the next earthquake tremor was expected.

University of California seismologist Bruce Bolt said the quake at 7:43 p.m. registered 4.7 on the Richter scale.

Tri-Cities Ambulance said no calls were received.

A spokesman at Valley Memorial Hospital said the only noticeable affect was "a pale emergency room crew."

First reports here were that the quake severed a water main at Seventh and K Streets, but a spokesman for the California Water Service Company said the pipe was reported severed shortly before the earthquake was felt.

Residents here were divided about the severity of the temblor.

Mrs. Ward Walker of Altamont, whose house lies on the quake's epicenter, said "It just shook the pictures and moved a few things around ... no damage."

But Joe Pellern, a resident on East Avenue in Livermore, said, "Some hanging lanterns went swinging, and an iron grate in front of the fireplace almost fell over. It was the worst jolt I ever felt."

Numerous telephone calls to residents in this area showed minimal damages to contents in the homes.

Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center and the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory here reported feeling the quake, although no damages were reported.

Preliminary inquiries indicated the tremor was felt from Kentfield in Marin County on the north to San Mateo to the south on the San Francisco peninsula. Similar calls from curious residents were also received in Solono County, as well as in Antioch and areas east of that city.

Some muscle behind two Dublin beefs

DUBLIN — The Dublin Chamber of Commerce has jumped on two community betterment bandwagons in an effort to rid their town of an unsightly trash dump on a main street and get road signs clarified that point the way to Dublin on Interstates 580 and 680.

Chamber President, Todd Lee, gave chamber community betterment Chairmen, Dave Burton, the go-ahead to write letters to proper authorities on the issues, Burton said. Burton is also chamber vice-president.

The trash dump is located on San Ramon Valley Boulevard between Amador Valley Boulevard and Silvergate Drive in Dublin. The fenced enclosure was put there by the Alameda County Road Department as an intermediate dump site for county street sweepers, according to county road department officials. Otherwise, sweepers have to drive to a central dump site on Vasco Road each time trucks are filled.

County road department officials said the area was fenced last January to keep the general public from dumping refuse there. They said some people had called to thank them for "consolidating" trash at the transfer dump site.

In a letter to Valerie Raymond, Alameda County's first district supervisor, Burton stated, "...The county street department established a dumping station for their street sweepers despite the fact this road is designated as a scenic highway by the state."

Another county department strictly enforces a sign restriction ordinance with threats of fines if a business puts a sign close to the road.

San Ramon Valley Boulevard is our main entrance street and it seems inconceivable that the county

Trustees will convene in the board room of the District Education Center, 123 Main St., Pleasanton, at 8.

On Wednesday night, Pleasanton Joint School District trustees will gather at 7:30 for a special board meeting.

Pleasanton trustees will also adopt a tentative 1977-78 budget, approve school level plans for Elementary Secondary Education Act (ESEA) Title I and Early Childhood Education.

An executive session is also planned.

Lab never lobbied, says story

LIVERMORE — Attempts by the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory's top management to influence politicians are not lobbying, the Lab said last week through its weekly newsletter, Newsline.

In the legal sense, "lobbying is an attempt to influence legislation by bribery, threat or other dishonest means," says the University of California General Counsel's office. "It is illegal."

The two Newsline stories dealing with lobbying and collective bargaining were prompted by the release earlier this month of previously - undisclosed letters from Lab Director Dr. Roger Batzel, in which he urges legislators to vote against a collective bargaining bill for LLL employes sponsored by Rep. Pete Stark (D-Oakland).

Electric penmanship

In April, three Lab management representatives told The Times that the Lawrence Lab had conducted no lobbying, formally or informally, on the collective bargaining bill.

The Batzel letters, dating back to April, 1976, also indicate that current Lab employe - employer relations programs are adequate, implying collective bargaining is not needed. "In summary, I would say that yes, we do have some problems, that I am aware of them and that there are existing mechanisms and procedures for both management and the staff to work together toward the best possible accommodation," Batzel wrote to a Wyoming Congressman.

A clown with a sad face and bad ribs

LIVERMORE — Seth Doulton, the young rodeo clown who was injured at the Livermore Rodeo while saving a fallen cowboy, is just about as blue now as the mustache he paints on his face.

Doulton, 23, was released yesterday from Valley Memorial Hospital where he was bedridden the past eight days. His injuries included a collapsed lung, three broken ribs back and jaw injuries.

When novice bullrider Vern Mendoza — a nephew of Livermore Rodeo Chairman Joe Serpa — fell from his Brahma bull, the red haired clown ran up to distract the beast.

In the process he fell under the 1,400 pound bull and was pounded on the back. An ambulance sped into the arena and rushed the clown to the hospital.

The gaiety of his big shorts, blue leotards, red shirt and suspenders won't be seen on the rodeo circuit for several months while he recuperates in his Santa Barbara winter home.

And, for a rodeo buff like Seth, that will be like torture.

He's the type that will saunter up and say "hello" with a wide grin as he prepares to meet the bulls and the excitement and danger that goes with it.

But his medical bills seem to wipe a bit of the grin off. VMH officials estimate the cost of patching up this clown will be approximately $2,000. Insurance will cover $1,200, but the now-unemployed clown needs another $800.

The Livermore Rodeo Association has opened a special fund for Doulton at the Livermore branch, Bank of America. They've already kicked in the first $250 and are asking Valley residents with a sense of charity and/or a love of rodeo to chip in a few dollars.

Donations can be sent to the Seth Doulton Fund at the bank, P.O. Box 1110, Livermore.

"Right now he's not too excited about getting back into the ring," said a hospital spokesperson who talked with Doulton prior to his release. "He'll probably continue to truck the bulls to all the rodeos after he recuperates."

Doulton works under contract for the Flying U Rodeo Company, Marysville, which produces the rodeo shows that tour the west.

Will he return to the arena and face the big Brahmas?

"Some people consider him insane for doing it," one teenage fan of Doulton's told The Times, "but he is skillful and it is an exciting job."

'Tennis Faire' faulted?

Pleasanton lost more than $7,000 in its nine and one-half month experiment with "Tennis Faire" at the Alameda County Fairgrounds. And Director of recreation Bob Caporusso will have to explain it to the city's park and recreation commissioners this Wednesday night before the board approves a new contract.

The commission will meet at 8 p.m. in the city council chambers, 30 W. Angela St.

Key school ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court let stand a California Supreme Court ruling that invalidated the state's school financing system.

State Superintendent of Schools Wilson Riles hailed the decision, and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said it served 'marching orders,' on the state to revamp school financing.

Granada star picked

Granada High School graduate Joey Wujek was selected Sunday to the Alameda County All-star basketball team that will meet Contra Costa in a two-game high school basketball "classic" next week.

Wujek, a 6-6 forward, will join coach Skip Mohatt, who regularly coaches at Amador Valley High School, as members of the Alameda team. The games will be played June 28, at the Richmond Auditorium, and June 30, at Cal State-Hayward.

Flap over storage yard called off

Robert Nahas withdrew plans for a controversial warehouse storage area yesterday, proposed for the lot across from Dublin's historical building complex.

The storage yard also would be next to San Ramon Road, which the Dublin Chamber of Commerce considers the gateway to Dublin and that reason figured heavily in Nahas' decision, too.

Nahas became aware of the opposition a few weeks ago and thought that he might have been able to make the storage yard compatible with the neighborhood by trying to give it an ersatz mission - style flavor, but it was not enough to impress the Chamber of Commerce or the Dublin Historical Society.

Both groups felt the warehouses would detract from the entrance to town and the historical complex on Donlon Way next to old St. Raymond's Church.

Judy Earl, president of the historical society, said her group has written to the state to place the area, including the property where Nahas has had an option, into a special historical district. She has had no an-

One semester of credit in the real world

DANVILLE — Four San Ramon Unified School District students have a more practical view of the world today thanks to a an executive internship program that began last September.

The high school students, as part of a nationwide program, took a semester sabbatical from school to serve as special assistants in government, community agencies and private business and industry.

Twenty-five students enrolled in the San Ramon district's intern program, one of only four in California.

The experience was an "eye-opener," said the four students from SRVUSD.

High school junior Chris O'Brien thought politicians were "greedy" men on "power trips."

Mark Guzman, meanwhile, saw government service as the best place "to help people help themselves."

Since interning, both have changed their views.

Camp Parks' gates swing wide

PLEASANTON — The "neighbors" of Camp Parks did not have to peek through the fence yesterday to see what's happening at the Sixth Army's Training Center.

Instead, Col. Mark Owens Jr., commanding officer of the 6237th USAR School, invited local civic leaders and the press for a luncheon and grand tour of the facility in an effort to create "good community relations."

"I had always been curious about Camp Parks' role in the community," said Livermore's assistant city manager Ed Schilling — guest at the event.

"The competence of the officers and NCOs impressed me," he said, "as well as how the women fit in."

Others on the guest list included Chamber of Commerce members from Dublin, Pleasanton, and Livermore; Ann Jolley of the Valley Community Services District, and Mary Warren from State Rep. Floyd Mori's office.

After the crew of Valley officials and Army brass finished their ice cream and watermelon, Col. Owens gave a brief speech about various occupational specialties offered at the school noting that 15 states are represented by students and faculty.

Pleasanton's Chamber of Commerce manager Chan Henderson commented that his office has been getting letters "for the past four or five months" from families of reservists inquiring about recreational facilities in the area.

"Many of the students are making their stay at Camp Parks a vacation with their families," Henderson said.

Prior to the grand tour, Col. Owens announced that he will be retiring in a few months and that his replacement will be Col. Conway V. Peterson, currently Director of Instruction at the school.

During this session, six courses are being taught to 146 students in the areas of clerk typist, finance, personnel management, material supply, armorer supply, and food services.

Col. Owen said the school also has courses for officers including one from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces for lieutenant colonels, and selected civilians.

Fallon dead at age 84

Daniel A. Fallon, 84, a descendant of the pioneer Valley family, died Sunday in a Livermore hospital.

His forebearers moved to the Valley in the 1870s.

He was an outstanding football player at St. Mary's College, and played semi-professional baseball in the Valley.

Mr. Fallon lived as a rancher for 30 years before delving into real estate between 1950 and 1973.

He was a life long member of St. Michael's Parish in Livermore.

Survivors include nephews James, Frank, George and William Fallon, all of Livermore; Daniel Fallon of Pittsburg; William, John F. and Joseph Murray of Livermore; Robert Murray, Oakdale; and Arthur Bell, Napa.

Surviving nieces include Ramona Murray, Livermore; Rose Murray Gregoratos, Vallejo; and Helen Murray of Fremont.

Friends may call at the Callaghan Mortuary, 3833 East Ave., Livermore, after 2 p.m. today.

A rosary will be recited in the mortuary at 8 o'clock this evening.

Mass will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday in St. Michael's Church, followed by interment in the church cemetery.

The special zone also might make it much easier to attract federal or state subsidies for the future development of the historical complex, said Earl.

"We're aiming at the sort of thing that has been done in Williamsburg, Va., but not on such a big scale, of course," said Earl.

R.I. Brown of Brittco, Inc., said he will build a storage warehouse soon on Dougherty Road at the east end of Dublin and suggested it will be a much better location for that type of facility than the gateway to Dublin would be.

Dublin resident Pete Hagerty agreed with Brown's sentiments. Noting that warehouse developers claim to attract customers from all over the area, not just Dublin, Hagerty commented, "When people don't want things in San Ramon or Pleasanton, they put 'em in Dublin."

Murray scores on the rise

DUBLIN — Results of Stanford Achievement Tests given Murray School District first through eighth graders in April show increased performance levels, generally, in reading, mathematics and language.

The test results were presented to Murray trustees last night at Wells School in Dublin.

Sixth graders of the past year tested particularly high (8.1 grade level equivalent) in reading. Scores were also higher than last year's sixth graders in math, auditory language and language arts.

Les Schmidt, curriculum coordinator for the district, said only at the second grade is there a discrepancy — and that is about one month on the average.

Students at all other grade levels in the district tested at or slightly above grade levels on the Stanford Reading, Math and Auditory tests.

Trustee Bob Foster said changes made in the curriculum two to three years ago apparently are beginning to show.

Schmidt told trustees a by-school test scores breakdown would be available soon.

It was learned the district's consolidation redistribution of Early Childhood Education Students and programs to four district schools has been tentatively okayed by the state Department of Education.

Cronin, Fallon and Murray can now begin planning for accommodation of students from Frederiksen in their 1977-78 ECE programs.

The board approved a resolution directing the Alameda County treasurer to invest $680,000 remaining from a 1972 bond issue in "approved investments at the highest rate of interest available."

Interest proceeds resulting from the investment would be credited to the MSD bond interest and redemption fund.

Complaints to the chamber have been growing about the unclear road signs for Dublin. One protestor said the Dublin sign on eastbound I-580 was not even lighted at night.

Due to the unlighted sign, one lady from Los Altos said she spent an hour one night trying to find the road into Dublin. At one point, she ended up in Hayward.

Burton has written C.R. Nordfelt on behalf of the chamber. Nordfelt is Senior Engineer of traffic in the county Department of Transportation. He directed copies to Valerie Raymond and Paul Ryan, general manager of Valley Community Services District (VCSD).

Ryan had also written Nordfelt after receiving complaints from people about the road signs.

Burton stated, "... It is very important for the business community's vitality to have easy access to Dublin and it is very difficult for a stranger to find out how to get off the freeway because there are no clearly defined offramps to our business section ..."

Burton indicated road sign clarification was needed for each direction on Interstates 580 and 680.

The ERA: a batlle to the finish

Some people say it would tear apart family life and destroy the home.

Others say it could give women, after centuries, equal employment rights.

One thing's for sure — the Equal Rights Amendment has been causing heated controversy from the time it was authored. And members of different women's organizations in the valley have also put themselves in the midst of the debate — they've taken sides on the issue. The local chapters of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and the League of Women Voters have both strongly endorsed the amendment, and leaders of the groups pledge to fight for passage this year.

A conservative group, led locally by Pleasanton homemaker Dee Schmidt, is called Women Who Want to be Women (WWWW), and they say they're fighting to defeat the ERA because it would adversely affect "children, family life and the home."

Only three states need to pass the ERA before it will be ratified — 35 states already have. And both sides of the argument are working furiously now, because the ratification movement will end in 1979, the deadline by which the issue must be passed or dropped.

For all the fuss, the ERA is only three sentences long. And it says that "equality of rights under the law ... shall not be denied ... by any state on account of sex." It states simply that Congress will enforce it, and that it will go into effect two years from passage. That's all.

Dee Schmidt, who's president of WWWW, an organization which is fighting a battle against what Mrs. Schmidt calls "women's liberation ideology," says the amendment would "take away women's legal protections."

"It simply gives women who want to work equal rights," contends Mary Schatz of the Livermore-Amador League of Women Voters. "It doesn't change any of the 'being on a pedestal thing' that's a social, not a legal matter."

Margaret McClelland, president of the League, says that a "fear of the unknown" is the major point of opposition to the ERA. "It's a fear that it will force a 'single sex,' that women will be forced to go to work. It just isn't true."

Mrs. Schmidt, whose group also supported Anita Bryant's drive to repeal the gay rights ordinance in Florida, contends that the amendment is based on the idea that "there is no difference between the sexes." And if that were so, she adds, there would be no rape laws "because you can't rape anyone if there's no difference." She adds that there would be no separate bathroom facilities for men and women under the ERA.

Mrs. Schatz of LWV counters: "Rape laws would be extended to protect men under ERA ... and laws protecting the right to privacy would also protect separate bathroom facilities."

There are also other debates that cause controversy among groups — the draft, for example.

Mrs. Schatz says that "right now, there is no draft, and when it is reinstituted, Congress will have the right to make certain exemptions" for working mothers who support a family, for example. But Mrs. Schmidt maintains that those who support the ERA have "come right out and said that women will be drafted — and they've rejected proposals by Sen. Sam Ervin (D-NC) that women be specifically exempted from a draft."

League of Women Voters activists Mary Schatz (left) and Margaret McClelland.

Dee Schmidt, president of Women Who Want to Be Women, says she's fighting "women's liberation ideology" and the ERA.

Perhaps Mrs. Schmidt's strongest opposition is what she and her group contend is a threat to family life. She estimates that there are 15 to 20 valley women in WWWW who get together to discuss legislation which is "anti-moral, anti-family and anti-Blibical." The group, she says, "believes that the Bible is our guide for living."

According to WWWW literature, there are differences in the physical capabilities and family responsibilities of men and women." And those, she says, are some of the aspects of "traditional family life" that would be altered. "I have the right to be supported by my husband and be a full-time homemaker," she maintains. "The ERA would change that."

McClelland, on the other hand, argues that certain laws would be altered with the passage of the ERA — but those are laws which have discriminated against women for centuries.

Protective labor legislation, she says, usually serves to keep women out of the labor market, rather than protect them once they enter it. "Men should have some of the protection of those laws extended to them, too," she contends.

"It's true that if a wife earns more, she won't be supported in the event od divorce," states Mrs. Schatz. "But there's no requirement that a husband support his wife anyway. Right now, two in five fathers make no support payments at all to their families. The laws should really be stronger."

Right now, the issue boils down to tttwo very strong, very committed sides. "We're going to stop ERA wherever we can," says Mrs. Schmidt. "The passage of the ERA is our first priority this year," vows Mrs. McClelland.

So, as furious struggling goes on at both sides of the issue, the fate of the ERA hangs in the balance.

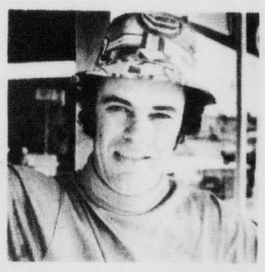
What about women's lib?

Tim Cole, Pleasanton clerk, Fremont: "I guess I'm against it. Some occupations they get into they can't really handle."

Carol Nies, housewife, Livermore: "Equal pay for equal jobs. It's an awareness of a woman more as an individual."



Cosimo Panetta, barber, Pleasanton: "I love it. Let them have more freedom — it's beautiful."

Shivon Riley, Safeway clerk, Livermore: "Women's lib means equal opportunity. It's as much a male liberation as a female liberation."

Harry Grewe, retired, Livermore: "It doesn't mean a thing to me."

Irene Cole, Pleasanton clerk, Fremont: "I kind of ignore it — to each his own."

Larry Landon, telephone repairman, Livermore: "I think it's going a little bit overboard. If a woman's doing a man's job, she shouldn't be put down just because she's a woman."

Kevin Richardson, truck driver, Pleasant Hill: "It's great. It means I don't have to pay for all my dates."

WOMEN PROFESSIONAL ARTISTS

The Women Professional Artists of Livermore organization is unique, because every member is doing something current and outstanding in the arts.

The atmosphere at their recent meeting was completely relaxed, as are their by-laws which state: The Women Professional Artists is an informally federated group having no traditional offices, offices to be appointed as the need arises. No formal dues structure has been established, and the members shall become inactive when requesting such status or by lack of participation in group activities.

However relaxed the organization appears, the group is dedicated to "seeking greater awareness of the role of women in today's art sphere."

Peggy Frank, who recently was honored by having a painting, one of 80 out of 1000 submitted, accepted for the Crocker-Kingsley Exhibit in Sacramento during the month of May, says of the group, "We've found our group to be extremely helpful. It's a support organization. We've kept each other going. We discuss things of mutual interest. We take each other's opinions very seriously. Good valid opinions do come across."

Another member, Karen Jenkins, had one of her handmade paper pieces accepted for the KQED auction at the Zellerbach Building in San Francisco. It had a little linen thread in it and was entitled: "Stitched." Karen's offering was one of 71 accepted pieces.

Karen, along with Caroline Foote and Dorothy Timourian, is a member of the Oakland Museum's Collector's Gallery.

Caroline Foote, who has taught art at Chabot College for five years, has one pottery piece on display at that gallery. She is also involved in graphics, printmaking. Dorothy Timourian, who has taught art at Chabot for two years, has a painting at the Oakland Museum, has just displayed her work at Kaiser Center, and plans for a show at Richmond Art Center in September of '78.

Meredith Mustard, calligrapher and painter, just returned from a calligraphy workshop in Portland with Lloyd Reynolds, the most prominent calligrapher in America. She has been thinking of combining watercolor painting and calligraphy, and writing a book using both.

Lee Plato Smith, involved in painting and textiles, is combining both in her current work, building up a body of work to have a show.

Trudy Willman, painter of colorful abstract acrylic paintings, had a two month long exhibit of her paintings at State Savings in Livermore.

Dorothy Barlett, painter and teacher, does extremely large semiabstract human forms. Her works are widely exhibited in galleries in the Bay Area.

As a group, meeting twice a month, they are currently reading and discussing a book about conceptual art. The purpose for the group stated in their by-laws is "to stimulate our creative powers through intellectual exchange."

According to Peggy Frank, being part of this group of outstanding women artists, "has made Livermore a more interesting place." Anyone interested in finding out more about the group may call Caroline Foote, 447-6516, or Dorothy Timourian, 447-6858.

Students study 'real world'

'Eye-opening' experiences

By BARBARA COHEN
Times Staff Writer

DANVILLE — High school junior Chris O'Brien used to believe politicians were "greedy" men on "power trips."

On the other hand, Mark Guzman, saw government service as the best place "to help people help themselves."

But in the last few months, both have drastically altered their opinions.

Six months ago Diane McPherson knew nothing about the world of criminal probation, while the intricacies of a savings and loan were a foreign language to Gail Matsumoto.

Yet today, both of these high school seniors can discuss the fields knowledgably and with confidence.

Where and how did they gain their insights?

Through the executive internship program of the San Ramon Valley High School District, which gives students a taste of life at the "top."

The program, which began last September, is part of a five-year-old nationwide project that enables high school students to take a semester sabbatical from school to serve as special assistants in government, community agencies, and private business and industry.

Twenty-five prospective executives were enrolled this past spring in the SRV program, the only one of its kind in Contra Costa County and one of four in the state.

For the four interns, the experience has been an obvious eye-opener.

"You're dealing with all kinds of people every day, and you must learn to adjust to and cope with them," declared McPherson, who spent her semester in the in-service training area of the county Probation Department.

Diane, a 17-year-old senior from San Ramon's California High, assisted information officer Ed Jimison put together staff training materials and programs while she learns what the probation system is all about.

Coping and adjusting were also a primary part of O'Brien's job as assistant to the legislative assistant to of State Senator John Nejedly, Walnut Creek. Chris spent a good part of his day on the phone answering questions from constituents who, says Chris, sometimes "make unreasonable requests."

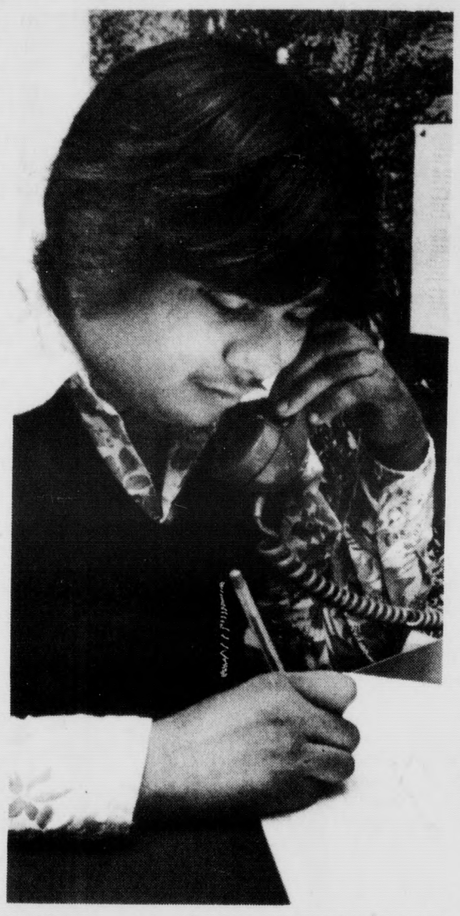
"It's difficult to constantly be nice to people with such requests," he said, or to deal with people who often "don't know what they want."

But he found a challenge even in those kind of requests. "You try and satisfy them without losing your cool," he said.

Working behind the scenes for a legislator has also changed the San Ramon High student's view of politicians. Before, he said, "my picture of a politician" was of a person "going to work two or three days a week and making tons of money. But that's not the way it is. They are basically very honest, hard working and intelligent people, and it's not an easy job."

But while Chris' view of government has changed for the better, Mark Guzman's has become more critical.

"I never realized how much politicking there is in county government," lamented Guzman, an intern with the county Office of Economic Opportunity.



Working as an intern for the county Office of Economic Opportunity taught Mark Guzman that politics isn't for him.

Attending county Board of Supervisors' meetings and sitting in on OEO planning and discussion sessions taught the California High senior a lesson:

"It told me that when I get out there, I'd better be careful. You have to join the system rather than buck it to hold a job and move up."

Such an impression has created some misgivings and confusion for Mark about seeking a future in government, which he previously felt was a good place "to help people."

"I don't know if I can hack all that (politicking)," he said. "I was more sure about what I wanted to do before I started the internship. I was curious more than anything about what goes on in government agencies."

Now that his curiosity has been satisfied, however, Mark says he is less interested in in getting involved in government.

But whatever he decides to do, Mark thinks the program taught him to "hold my own" in the real world.

Confusion about a future career has also become a problem for Gail Matsumoto of California High. Gail, who spent the past four months assisting the general manager of Franklin Savings and Loan Association in Danville, once thought she wanted to be a dental hygienist or dental assistant. Now, she isn't sure.

"I've covered a broad range of things in the short time I've been here," said the 17-year-old senior, who has worked as a teller, loan processor and has learned what goes into appraising property.

"Banking," she continued, "seems to offer a lot of opportunities, and there are many ways to go."

But no matter what the interns choose to do with their fast approaching futures, they will always view the intern program as a unique experience.

The program also offers an excellent opportunity to make contacts for future jobs, said Natasha Cole, coordinator of the San Ramon program. At least half the interns are offered positions.

But while the emphasis is on practical experience, the students still maintain some heavy academic responsibilities.

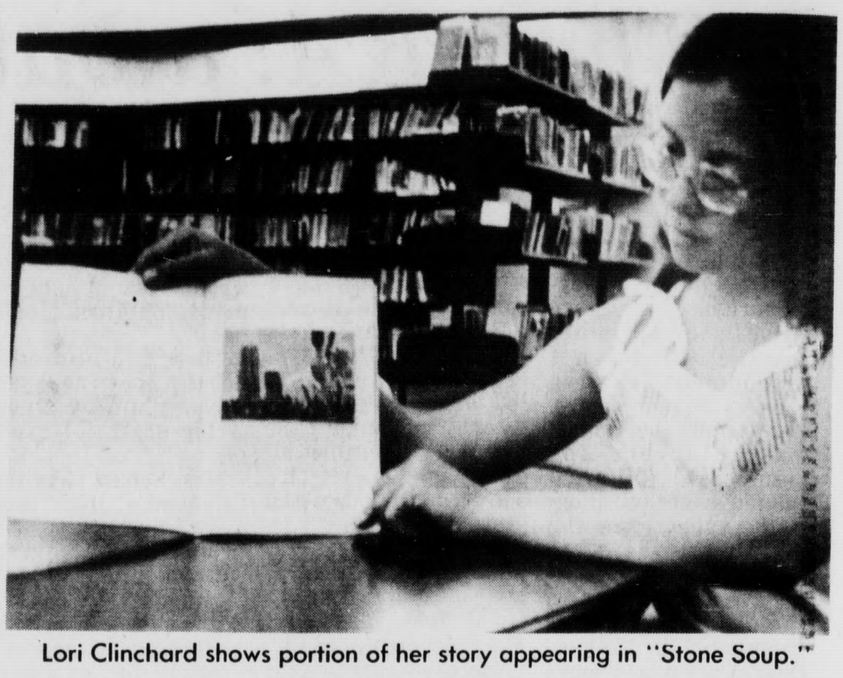
Each intern is required to keep a daily analytical log of his activities, present a term project based on an aspect of his work, and turn in a full report analyzing in detail the agency he interned with.

One aspect of the program stands out above all, said Cole. By encouraging maturity and independence, "the program not only breaks down the generation gap, it breaks right through it. They (the interns) see pretty nice adults out there — people who are caring and helpful, who try to make sure they suceed.

"They find out that business is not always a cold and inhuman place."

And what do the adults get in return? Sponsor and OEO director Judy Miller sums it up:

"I've learned a great deal by the experience. Being exposed to youth — their thinking, their ideas, their approaches — I'm frankly reinforced that those who come after us are going to be in good hands."



Lori Clinchard shows portion of her story appearing in "Stone Soup."

It's fun to make it happen, says author

PLEASANTON— The imagination and writing ability of a Harvest Park School sixth grader has earned her original story a prominent place in a national magazine for young authors and artists.

Lori Clinchard, who just completed the sixth grade, had her story published in "Stone Soup," a magazine for children published five times yearly. Her story covers parts of seven pages and includes appropriate illustrations drawn by other children.

Lori's published effort comes as the result of a Writers Club meeting at the school. Judy Bryer, advisor for the club and school librarian, had shown club members a picture and asked each to write something about it. The picture showed two young black boys and another in front of them who looks like he's walking away from the two, according to Lori.

The assignment was to write as much as each student thought necessary in 10 to 15 minutes. Lori was able to put together a good foundation right away and, thus, expanded on her initial theme during half-hour sessions at home for the following two days.

She later read her completed story to club members and Mrs. Bryer suggested she send it in to "Stone Soup."

Lori sent her story, "Vacant Lot Fight," to the book the end of April. It appeared in the school year-end edition.

Her story leads off, "Jock and Micke were left standing by the old alley while Linde walked off nervously. He had been threatened by the Bloodbirds and was trying to get home safely."

Lori's impressions from the picture shown by Mrs. Bryer indicated angry feelings, a "score" to settle and a street fight involving a youth gang.

From those premonitions, she wrote an interesting and well-worded story that covered almost seven pages.

Lori ends her story in part by writing, "The three boys trudged off slowly but happily while Rocko lay on the dirt muttering in frustration, shame and defeat. And the Bloodbird gang each slowly drifted off his own way, a bit sad about Rocko but at the same time they had a strange feeling of freedom."

While noting this is her first-ever story published, Lori says she would have "kept on trying even if I hadn't had this published.

"I think its fun to be able to make anything happen that you want, and not have any limits."

High court rules, state must revamp school financing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand a ruling striking down California's local property tax system for financing public schools.

The justices refused to review a California Supreme Court decision last December invalidating the state's system of providing a free education to about 4.5 million children each year.

In California, state schools chief Wilson Riles said he was pleased with the decision and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said the decision means it is time to act on a pending school finance reform.

"I'm pleased at the decision of the court," Riles said. "Of course it doesn't change anything, and the legislature still has a responsibility to act on the Serrano mandate that there be equity for every child."

Brown said the decision not to review the California court ruling gives California "it's marching orders. The time to act is now. And, as we do so by adding money, we should insist upon school reform and attention to basics."

Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy of San Francisco said the decision "means the legislature has no option but to act this year on a major school finance bill, and I'm committed to that."

The justices refused to hear an appeal from a California Supreme Court decision last December which struck down the state school financing system as a violation of the state constitution.

The state's system, in use for the past 100 years, was found by the state courts to rely too heavily on the wealth of individual school districts and the local property taxes they can generate to support education.

The state court rulings, in effect, gave the California Legislature until 1980 to draw up a new school financing plan which would share the wealth among all 1,054 school districts in the state.

The rulings have a staggering impact on California education, affecting the distribution of $7 billion annually in public support for schools.

Relief measures for trees suffering from drought

Trees in the Valley that are not normally irrigated may be threatened by the drought this summer. Some concerned scientists at U.C. Davis dug into their files and found some tips that could save some of the local greenery.

Eventhough a tree or large shrub in your landscape has always lived without irrigation, it may not be able to survive the drought of '77. In fact such landscape plants may be in serious danger this year, says a University of California horticulturist.

Most trees with no apparent supply of water except rainfall are there under stress this year because hasn't been much rain. Some of them however, could be in even worse trouble because a supplemental source of water is no longer available, according to Richard W. Harris, Department of Landscape Horticulture, U.C.Davis.

For example, trees near the edge of a landscaped area may have roots that reach into the irrigated zone. If irrigation is reduced because of the water shortage, those trees may suffer.

Non-irrigated trees should be watched for signs of water stress, such as wilting or dropping of leaves. If they start to show symptoms, one deep irrigation may be enough to let them survive the summer. Otherwise, Harris said, some trees undoubtedly will die during the next few months.

How to irrigate trees and other landscape plantings in a time of water shortage is described in a new U.C. publication. To get a free copy send a postcard request to "Saving Water in Landscape Irrigation," U.C. Leaflet 2976, Box 1629, Richmond, L1 Ca. 94802, or contact your county office of U.C. A gusher turns into a fizzle for park

DUBLIN — After extensive testing, a hoped-for water gusher from a well at Boone Acres Park turned out to be a fickle-trickle, according to spokesmen from Valley Community Services District (VCSD).

The five-acre park is located on Davona Drive in San Ramon.

VCSD Director of Public Works, Doug Nelson and VCSD Parks Facilities Coordinator, Waide Egener, said the well was producing 30 gallons per minute. A minimum of 100 gallons per minute is needed to make it feasible to use the well-water for irrigation purposes, Nelson claimed.

VCSD has been searching for alternate non-potable water sources, such as wells, for use at their parks to keep grass from dying. VCSD has put in two other parks recently, Athan Downs in San Ramon and Dublin Sports Grounds in Dublin.

More potable (drinkable) water from primary sources could be conserved if alternate sources are found to use for irrigation purposes, Egener pointed out.

He explained another purpose for seeking alternate water sources was to protect investment of public funds.

"These newer parks represent a substantial investment in terms of turf. If it isn't watered heavily during the rooting stage it will die."

Egener and Nelson said they had not given up on the Boone Acre well and/or finding other alternate water sources for use there.

Perhaps we could store water from the Boone Acre well in a holding tank," Nelson said. "Or perhaps drill the well deeper. We haven't given up."

The well is drilled to 320 feet.

Egener said he and his staff were searching old records looking for previously drilled test-hole sites that went down 500 feet.

"Although these sites might not be close enough to Boone Acres to use there, they would at least show if there is an increased water flow at that depth. If so, we would feel warranted to drill deeper at the Boone Acres site."

A well system should be operational at Athan Downs this week. One is being planned for Dublin Sports Grounds.

Use of wells will not appreciably lower the water table, Nelson reported.

Everybody's got a pitch for funds

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Spokesmen for the poor, blind, old, young and downtrodden trooped before the county administrator for over two hours Monday asking for a piece of the $9.4 million revenue sharing pie.

Administrator Arthur Will explained to the 75 or so in the audience that as the person responsible for putting together the county budget he was required to hold a public hearing.

He announced that Monday's hearing was only the first in a series of hearings that would continue throughout the summer. The requests submitted Monday would go to the Board of Supervisors and would then be referred to the supervisors' finance committee for deliberation. Requests from 28 speakers Monday ranged from a small $8,000 bite of the revenue sharing pie for the Japanese - speaking elderly to a call for the whole $9.4 million to be spent on property tax reduction.

Most of the speakers at Monday's hearing asked county officials to fund human services with the $9.4 million rather than finance capital improvements.

Barbara Millif Wee Care Center for multi - handicapped children Concord, told Will the center did not have funding problems until 1972.

She said it was in that year that the federal government stopped adding more monies to human services. The Nixon administration, instead, turned to revenue sharing.

Local jurisdictions gained more control over funds but the money did not always go to fund human services.

This county has used its revenue sharing funds, thus far, to finance the new County Jail and to reduce property taxes. Millif asked Will to use part of this coming year's revenue sharing allotment to take care of the $1.4 million deficit in the Mental Health Services budget. She explained that her program is funded through that budget. In the past few years her staff has had no increases in salaries, insurance costs have risen 87 per cent and transportation are up 45 per cent, she said.

Cora Birch representing the West County Center for the Blind, led a contingent of blind to the board chambers. She told Will the center was running out of money for operating costs.

Waltec Lowin said he represented Crockett voters. He asked for $1 million to help fund the new sewage system in that area. He said residents were being charges $80 a year for the new system which was mandated by federal and state regulations.

A representative for the Japanese - speaking elderly said the Japanese had been in the county for 75 years and had never asked for special funds. She added that Japanese elderly need help like all other old people. She said that present senior citizens programs fail to meet the needs of the Japanese because of the language barrier.

West county citizens rose one after another to request more mental health services. Dorothy Gayles, who operates a residence for the mentally disturbed, asked for a half-way house in West County for patients released from state institutions.

A Richmond minister who operates a half-way house for 14 ex-offenders asked for expansion of the Mental Health Clinic in West County.

Ethel Dodson, Welfare Rights Organization, Richmond, said the county should emphasize alternatives to incarceration rather than the County jail.

Contact was not lobbying

June 15 Newsline interview that the Lab neither opposes nor endorses collective bargaining for its employes.

"The Lab's and University's position on particular collective bargaining legislation would depend on its detailed provisions," Carothers was quoted as saying.

Carothers was one of those interviewed by The Times in April.

He opposed the Stark Amendment because it did not "really provide the definitions, specifications of rights and obligations of both parties, and so on that you find in a collective bargaining bill," Newsline said. "Not because it's about collective bargaining per se."

On the lobbying issue, Carothers said that LLL and UC officials had a "considerable" degree of contact with state and federal legislators. This included appearances before legislative committees, correspondance with legislative representatives, and questions from Congressmen.

Sandia - developed electronic pen and tablet which can be incorporated into a signature verification system are demonstrated by J.B. Snelling, co-developer of the devices.

Your writing analyzed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — An instrumented ballpoint pen and writing tablet which could be used to produce a unique electronic profile of an individual's handwriting have been developed at Sandia Laboratories.

Developers of the pen and tablet believe the instruments can be incorporated into signature verification systems to help control access to areas where personnel identification is required, and likely can be used by banks, department stores and other businesses.

Components similar to those in phonograph cartridges, which produce voltages in reponse to an applied pressure, are the heart of the electronic pen and "paper."

Transducers in the pen and tablet produce signals which reflect both the movements and the pressures which are produced by a person writing his signature. The combination of these signals creates a unique profile of a person's handwriting. This is processed by computer and compared with a file signature retrieved from the computer's memory.

Preliminary tests indicate that the pen and tablet are highly reliable, producing distinctive handwriting profiles which will be difficult, if not impossible, for a forger to duplicate. In addition, the instruments are compact, rugged, and simple to build and service.

Two ceramic components in the pen are bonded along an alumimum shaft which holds the ballpoint refill in place. One senses horizontal movement, like crossing a "t," while the other senses vertical movement such as writing the stem of a "p."

"It may be possible for a forger to produce a signature which looks like an original," says C.E. Land, one of the pen and tablet developers, "but the electrical signal profile would appear significantly different."

The Energy Research and Development Administration, which contracts with Sandia, has applied for a patent on the device.

'Marching orders' for state schools

In appealing to the Supreme Court, Los Angeles County government and school officials said the state court rulings could not stand because the original suit challenging the system's validity never made the governor or legislature parties to the case.

"Millions of children and future generations of millions of children have been denied procedural due process law," the appeal said. "These millions of children should have been represented by those charged by the California Constitution with the duty to provide for their education, namely the legislature and the governor."

The California Supreme Court ruling, which affirmed the decision of a state trial court, essentially leaves it up to the state legislature to come up with a remedy.

The appeal questions the court's authority to do so when the legislature was not a party in the case, which began in 1968 when the parents of 27 Los Angeles County school children sued county officials and several school districts.

After various preliminary court rulings stretched out over a six-year period, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Bernard Jefferson ruled in 1974 that the state's school-financing system was not valid because it violated the equal protection provisions of the state constitution.

Under California's "foundation program" of school funding, one major component is local supplements raised by using local property taxes.

Most states have similar programs.

The California Supreme Court ruled that "so long as the assessed valuation within a district's boundaries is a major determinant of how much it can spend for its schools, only a district with a large tax base will be truly able to decide how much it really cares about education."

"The poor district cannot freely choose to tax itself into an excellence which its tax rolls can not provide," the state court said.

Chiropractic Health Hints
BY DR. RAYMOND SERAFIN, D.C.
A NATURAL HEALTH FAMILY PRACTICE
IF YOU DO NOT ENJOY GOOD HEALTH
CONSULT YOUR CHIROPRACTOR FIRST
YOUR NERVOUS SYSTEM IS THE KEY TO HEALTH
Spinal nerve interference is often the difference between sparkling health and that tired, worn - out feeling.
Far more important than germs is the health factor that is carried over the nervous system. This force, which is carried and distributed by the nerves, we call vital nerve energy for lack of a better name. It is the invisible agent that makes orderly life possible.
Trouble begins when such a directing force is interfered with. For example, if we interrupt or break the electric power line coming from a power plant, the lights flicker and go out, generators in industrial plants slow down and stop. The interruption if not remedied will eventually result in paralysis and breakdown.
And so it is with all the spinal nerve trunks which supply that vast maze of connecting nerves that reach in the remotest portion of the body. If these nerves are interferred with, something will happen at the end of the line.
It is well to remember the dual function of this marvelous system of nerves. Not only are the commonplace senses of seeing, hearing, feeling, smelling, and tasting delicately administered, but the central nervous system likewise regulates and times the various activities of the body so nicely that order and system prevail throughout.
Scant attention was paid to interference with nerve flow or irritation of spinal nerves until chiropractic began in 1895. Since that time modern chiropractic methods have enabled its practitioners to trace the cause of disease and relieve it at its source.
Chiropractors maintain that the spine is the key to the nervous system because it is the distribution center. Keep the spine in adjustment and all is well. Neglect the spine and nerve channels are likely to be blocked, resulting in disturbed function and impared health.
No healing profession studies the fundamentals of natural health with the purpose of using them in your behalf as thoroughly as the chiropractor. Consult him and he will point out plainly the merits and the advantages of natural health methods.
For more information on your nervous system call
Dr. Raymond Serafin D.C. at 846-4732 or write 60 Mission Dr., Pleasanton-

Tales of two Als

Just Ask

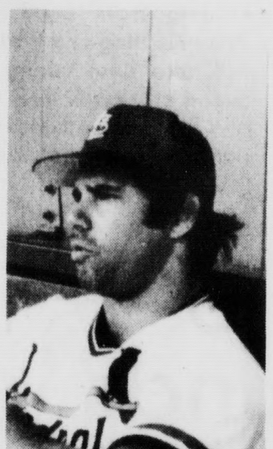
The tipoff:

Among the things you don't read about Al Davis, the seclusive boss of the world champion Oakland Raiders, are such gestures as offering to seek the best medical care in the world for the late Wells Twombly when the San Francisco sports columnist's liver failed and it looked like a transplant might help.

Q. It was a Monday night game, Cardinals vs. Reds, score tied, top of the ninth as southpaw Al Hrabosky in relief faced three good and eager left-hand batters. Alas, he promptly gave up two singles and a walk to load the sacks with none out! A hit or a sacrifice fly or a suicide bunt would have been fatal. But the Mad Hungarian, unlike Napoleon 162 years ago, disdained Waterloo. He strolled off the mound toward shortstop, commenced his ritual or psychic act, then plunked the ball into his glove, hustled back to the mound and struck out three dangerous righthand batters. Has this near-Herculean pitching feat been duplicated before? — Raymond Dasch, Fairfield, O.

First, it wouldn't have been "duplicated before" — Hrabosky would do the duplicating. In the long history of the majors there have been many and similar heroic relief stints. The one that comes to mind immediately, and under even more dramatic circumstances, was the relief feat by another old Cardinal, Grover Cleveland Alexander, who saved the seventh game of the World Series against the Yankees when he came in from the bullpen in the seventh inning, hangover and all, and struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases loaded.

Q. Re your answer about the treatment of Bill Melton's back problem, I rather think it uses the juice of the papaya (not the papyrus), and the result is not atrophy but dissolving of the disc. It is still and experimental project that only certain orthopedic and neurosurgeons are permitted to use. — Don Brown, Santa Maria, Calif.



Al Hrabosky

Editor Brown is certainly right in his correction. I can only confess that as an ink-stained wretch, I made a Freudian gravitation toward the papyrus, from which the old Egyptians originally fashioned paper and which certainly doesn't have any medicinal qualities.

Why would the Pittsburgh Pirates have ever let a fine young hitting outfielder like Mitchell Page get out of their system and turn up as a slugger for the Oakland A's? — Wayne R., Youngstown, Ohio.

The original logic focused on the fact that in four years in their farm system, Page had never hit .300, was supposed to be a sucker for changeups and a bust against good pitching. Also, the Pirates needed Phil Garner from the A's to play third base. And Mitch was no fancy dan in the outfield. He's been a revelation so far in his major league debut. Incidentally, on the A's he's been reunited with another bright rookie, third baseman Wayne Gross — they were teammates at Cal Poly (Pomona).

Q. How old is Butch Wynegar of the Minnesota Twins? What is his real first name? — D.C., Menominee, Wis.

The bright young catcher turned 21 in March. His full name is Harold Delano Wynegar, Jr. His grandmother nicknamed him "Butch."

Before the newly crowned NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers start thinking dynasty, they better consider the tenuous physical and emotional state of their key man, Bill Walton.

Giants shake, rattle and lose

SAN FRANCISCO — Reserve shortstop Mick Kelleher's triple to right-center scoring Joe Wallis from first base gave the Chicago Cubs a 10-9 win over the San Franicsco Giants in a wild and wooly nationally-televised baseball game that went 12 inning Monday night.

Kelleher, who came off the bench in eighth inning to replace injured starter Ivan DeJesus, shared the spotlight with ex-Giant Bobby Murcer in a game that featured 27 base hits with 39 players seeing action in the three-hour, 57-minute marathon.

Murcer, booed roundly by San Francisco fans with each batting appearance, answered them by clubbing a home run and two doubles, driving in six runs to keep the Cubs in contention.

The win by first-place Cubs snapped a five-game victory string by the Giants.

The game started as a pitching duel between the Giants' Jim Barr and Chicago's Ray Burris as each hurled four scoreless innings before the game developed into a wide-open affaor. The Cubs broke the ice in the top of the fifth inning when Murcer connected on a 1-1 pitch by Barr and hammered it over the right-field fence at the 375-foot sign with two men aboard, capping a four-run outburst.

The Giants bounced back with two runs in their half of the inning as Barr and Rob Andrews led off with back-to-back singles. Terry Whitfield walked to load the bases with no outs, but Burris took off some of the pressure by forcing Darrel Evans to pop to second baseman Manny Trillo.

Gary Thomasson was out on a infield tap, scoring Barr, then Willie McCovey's singled up the middle where DeJesus made a diving stop to hold the Giant first baseman to a single, although Andrews scored. Bill Matlock walked to load the bases again but Jerry Morales made a long run and one-handed catch of Tom Foli's bid for extra bases in deep center to stamp out the threat.

The Giants chased Burris in sixth inning with a three-run rally that started with walks to Marc Hill and Andrews with one out. Willie Hernadez came on in relief and was tagged for a 365-foot homer over the left-field fence by pinch-hitter Jack Clark. It was Clark's fourth homer in as many games.

The Cubs regained the lead in the eighth inning when Murcer doubled and Morales hit a off-field homer run to make it 6-5 Chicago.

T-V Macks mark now 0-3

Hayward's Bercovich missed both of their extra points and Tri-Valley scored a touchdown and a field goal.

When looking at the score of Sunday's Connie Mack contest between those two baseball teams, confusion could easily arise.

Bercovich raced out to an early 10-0 lead, but Tri-Valley rallied back to tie the score at 10-10, only to be killed on a two-run homer by the amazing Dan Pearson in a 12-10 loss to Bercovich Sunday at Max Baer Park in Livermore.

Rallies such as the locals produced in the sixth inning only happen in dreams, but it proved to be true after all when Tri-Valley scored twice in each of the fourth and fifth innings while breaking out for six tallies in the sixth to tie the game that had long since been assumed over.

Bercovich, a team that has 139 games on its schedule this year, came into the game fresh from a 9-7 loss earlier in the morning in Santa Cruz. No hint of fatigue was present when they arrived at the ball park, though.

Pearson ripped a triple to deep center field to score two runs in the first inning and later scored on an infield out as Hayward roared out to an early 3-0 advantage off of Tri-Valley hurler Rick Keizer.

Allen, whose past history includes leaving several clubs without permission, was not around for comment when Finley made his announcement after the A's had defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-1.

Wujek makes county five

OAKLAND — Joey Wujek, who was an honorable mention all-East Bay forward while at Granada High School last winter, has been kept on the 11-man roster of the Alameda County all-star team that will meet a similar group of Contra Costa County all-stars in a pair of contests next week.

The 6-6 Wujek will join Amador Valley High School coach Skip Mohatt, the coach of the Alameda squad, as valley contributions to the team. He beat out the likes of Hayward's Dan Jardine, a last minute addition to the try-out roster, Darrell Mellion of St. Mary's, Emery's Steve Hudson, Logan's Blake Chong, Alameda's Pete Michaleto and American's Tom Hunter.

According to reports, Wujek impressed the five-man selection committee with two strong scrimmage efforts Saturday and Sunday, when the quintet adjourned to make its decision.

The Alameda County team, bolstered by the strength of the Oakland playgrounds, was expected to have an easy time of things in the Classic, to be played June 28 at the Richmond Auditorium and June 30 at Cal State-Hayward's gymnasium.

However, All-American Cliff Robinson of Castlemont, Alameda's biggest player at 6-8, failed to show for the try-outs as did Dave Cornelious of McClymonds, the quick, smooth, ball-handling guard.

Neither San Ramon grad Phil Wiltz or Monte Vista's Ken Krey cracked the Contra Costa roster.

ALAMEDA-CONTRA COSTA BASKETBALL CLASSIC ROSTERS

Contra Costa — Pete Richardson, Northgate; Jim Swan, Northgate; Layne Olson, Ygnacio Valley; Joe Doherty, Salesian; Brett Raven, Acalanes; Tony Thomas, El Cerrito; Rick McHone, Salesian; Jim Murphy, Campolindo; Stan Van Gundy, Alhambra; Ken Carter, Richmond; Bart Bowers, Kennedy (Richmond).

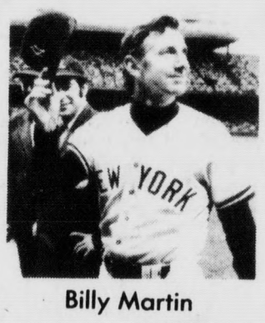
Martin's still Yankee boss



Billy Martin

DETROIT — The New York Yankees said Monday night they consider Billy Martin the best manager in major league baseball and said no managerial change is planned.

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, made the announcement in a 10-minute news conference in the press box at Tiger Stadium just before Monday night's game between the Yankees and Detroit Tigers.

"Although there have been unconfirmed rumors regarding changes in personnel and management of the New York Yankees ballclub, there will not be a change in managers regardless of what has been said. Billy Martin will continue as manager of the New York Yankees," Paul said.

He emphasized the decision to retain Martin was his alone.

"Once the game starts, we consider Martin the best manager in the majors," Paul continued, referring to Martin's penchant for irking his employers with off-field remarks and actions which have gotten him fired from previous managerial jobs in Minnesota, Detroit and Texas.

Following the fiery Martin's latest scrape Saturday with high-priced right fielder Reggie Jackson in Boston — an argument which nearly ended in a dugout fist fight — rumors abounded that Martin's dismissal was imminent.

However, said Paul, "No one incident will determine whether a club would keep or not keep a manager. Things like this are of great importance and we are now all happy. We consider Martin the best manager in major league baseball."

Big field for Jr. rodeo

More than four hundred youthful cowpersons are expected to compete in the Livermore Junior Rodeo scheduled for Robertson Park July 16 and 17.

The participants, age 18 and younger, will come from various parts of the state to compete in 19 events. Already entered are California's top high school bull rider, Kurt Allmon, Livermore's Robin Turner and Lynn Peterson, the queen of the senior rodeo.

Tickets will become available at Baughman's Western Wear July 2.

Brokers win tourney

Allied Brokers of Pleasanton beat Livermore's Pizza Arcade, 13-3, with a six-run first inning rally to win the G.A. Shafto Women's Softball tournament over the weekend.

Allied Brokers won its first three games and waited for Pizza Arcade to fight its way up through the losers bracket, where it had to play three successive games, by beating Leon's Libbers, 10-4, and Amador Linen, 8-0.

None of the top four teams lost to anyone outside of that select group.

The tourney was Shafto's first attempt at promoting a women's tourney, but details of a July 16-17 tourney, with 14 teams involved, are expected to be forthcoming.

Miller stops 'Cats

Dennis Miller didn't allow and earned run, struck out four and yielded just four hits as Pleasanton's Reynolds Metal Astros defeated the Newark Bearcats, 8-2, in Big League District 57 baseball over the weekend.

Miller and Pat Driver, who also stole a base and scored two runs, clouted solo homers for the winners while Mitch Pereira stole twice and tallied a pair of runs.

Elissondo leads Bill's Wash win

Karen Ellissondo doubled twice, singled and clouted a three-run homer as her five runs batted in led Bill's Portable Wash to a 16-8 win over Atteberry Insurance in Pleasanton Women's Softball League action recently.

Winning pitcher Faye Ponce singled three times and doubled for a total of three rbi, while Cheryl Hemann's four hits were good for two rbi and Judy Perry doubled in two runs.

CC School could have PL, too

The San Ramon Valley Unified School District Community Services Department will post an interest survey sheet at its Country Club School recreation site in order to determine if enough interest exists in the area to run a peanut league baseball program this summer.

Peanut League is Community Services' fun-oriented baseball program for boys and girls 6-12. The program stresses fundamentals of the game and the meaning of team work.

The survey sheet will remain posted till Friday and any persons who would like to see such a program may sign the sheet.

Ruiz 'vette finishes 15th

PORTLAND, Ore. — Livermore's Ed Ruiz drove his Corvette 350 to a 15th place finish in the G.I. Joe's Rose Cup Trans-Am Championship sportscar race at Portland International Raceway a week ago.

Ruiz, who qualified in 28th position, picked up two points in the championship standings, to rank 16th after three events, and $500 for his 45-lap effort in the 50-lap, 97.5-mile race.

Danville's David Mock fared a little better, picking up $1100 and 12 driver points for his ninth place finish aboard Vic Hubbard's Mocko Corvette 427. Mock ranks third in the Category I point standings, with a total of 27 markers.

The race was won by Category II driver George Follmer of Huntington Harbor. In Category I, Mock was third and Ruiz, ninth.

The next major event on the Sports Car Club of America circuit is the Nelson Ledges Road Course at Warren, Ohio, where they'll race a week from today.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I was getting serious about a man I know until I went to a local pool with him and discovered he has tattoos on his chest and back. It shocked me and somehow turned me off like few other things could. I know he's still the same person but this tattoo business just seems so dumb and crazy to me. I can't explain it to him because I don't want to hurt his feelings and he doesn't know why I don't want to see him anymore. I can't be serious about him now and I think he'd be wasting his time because our relationship can't possibly get anywhere. — O.V.

DEAR O.V.: If a tattoo can demolish your whole relationship, then it must not have been founded on very solid ground to begin with. If you could overcome your horror at this needlepoint on your boyfriend's torso, you might gain some insights into his background by asking him when and how he got his decorations.

Tattoos can be a sign of growth and health, according to Dr. James Orten and William Bell of the University of Tennessee.

Instead of viewing tattoos as a badge of defiance, it might be more productive to see them as an attempt to cope or adjust to one's circumstances and to communicate one's feelings about them or about one's self.

Men, especially young men, get tattoos in an attempt to establish some kind of clear, personal identity. It's as if they don't know who they are and they feel if they put some kind of tag or label on themselves, their identity will become clearer to themselves and to others. Men often get tatoos when they are in environments that are depersonalizing, such as the armed services.

It's possible your friend dislikes and regrets his tattoos as much as you do. You'd hurt his feelings less by discussing them than you would by simply dropping him without any explantation.

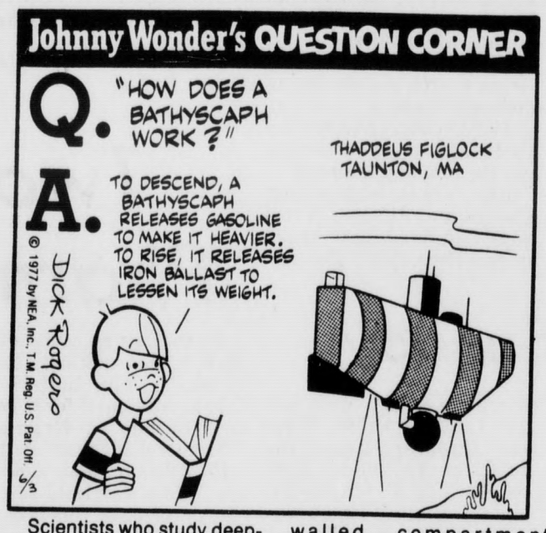
DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My wife and I just learned that both our college son and daughter are living with friends as if they were married. My wife feels this is immoral. I think, as far as my daughter's concerned, it's just damn stupid. No man's going to marry a girl if he doesn't have to. I'm really tempted to cut off funds from both of them. I don't see why college authorities can't do something about this sort of thing. If you ask me, this is one of the reasons that marriage is going down the drain. Is there anything my wife and I can do short of ranting and raving? — C.N.

DEAR C.N.: I'm afriad not. Parents who interfere in their youngsters' romances seem to make the bonds between the young lovers stronger, rather than weaker. This change in life style is part of the sexual revolution that has been taking place over the last decade. I don't agree that living together before marriage is necessarily destructive. It can teach the individuals involved that they're not ready for marriage, it can lead to individual growth, and as long as there are no children involved, it needn't be viewed as totally negative.

I sympathize with you and your wife but I think you may be overreacting. Situations and philosophies are different today and most young men don't automatically shun marriage just because they can enjoy sexual relations without it. Young people now are more apt to marry for the right reasons — common interests and companionship — rather than to satisfy their desire to have sex. Since they can have sex without marriage, marriage, in a sense, becomes more serious than in the past.

I definitely think you shouldn't penalize your children by withhholding money. This will create many problems and will accomplish nothing.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER



Q. "HOW DOES A BATHYSCAPH WORK?"
A. TO DESCEND, A BATHYSCAPH RELEASES GASOLINE TO MAKE IT HEAVIER. TO RISE, IT RELEASES IRON BALLAST TO LESSEN ITS WEIGHT.

Scientists who study deep-sea life sometimes ride to the depths in a special kind of submarine called a bathyscaph (pronounced BATH-i-skaf). It can dive more than 6 miles to explore the deepest parts of the ocean.

The bathyscaph consists of a ball-shaped diving compartment attached to the bottom of a submarine-shaped hull filled with gasoline. The buoyancy of the lighter-than-water gasoline makes the craft float.

To make the bathyscaph descend, the diver releases some of the gasoline, which is replaced by water, which makes the bathyscaph heavy enough to sink. The steel-walled compartment protects the cres from the crushing water pressure at the bottom.

To ascent, the diver lightens the craft by releasing iron pellets from ballast containers in the hull. Propellers near the bow drive the bathyscaph when submerged.

The bathyscaph gets its name from Greek words for "deep boat."

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — Having recently undergone surgery to repair bilateral inguinal hernias, I am trying to find information on short and long-range health and exercise programs that will build up the abdominal muscles' strength properly, yet not damage the surgical repairs.

Can you help by giving some instructions or referring me to some book or pamphlet?

DEAR READER — Yes, you need the same exercises most people need to avoid a "bay window." The problem is based on abdominal obesity and loss of muscle tone. I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding The Big Middle. It will give you instructions on exercises that you can use.

At the beginning you should simply learn to contract your abdominal muscles. You can lie down on your back and suck in your stomach muscles and tense them in this position. Learn the feel of your abdominal muscles tightening. You can relax them and then tighten them again. By doing this repeatedly you can begin to build up their tone.

Don't overdo it at first or you will have sore belly muscles. I would suggest no more than 10 contractions at a time to start with and no more than one such exercise period a day until you are sure you are not going to have sore muscles. Then you can progress on to other exercises outlined in The Health Letter.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have two pre-school children who are taken care of by a woman while I work. She was recently operated on for an intestinal blockage. During the operation it was discovered that she has a tumor in her pancreas which turned out to be malignant. She is currently taking medication and returns to the hospital for radiation treatments. She doesn't know how long she will live.

She wants to return to babysit for my children. I'm wondering if there is any danger to my children if she does.

DEAR READER — I sympathize with your concern as a good mother. There is no danger to your children from the lady's cancer at all — it is not contagious — or from her treatments.

People who have cancer sometimes have more problems than just coping with their illness.

Here is a good hand for use of the code word ARCH. At least South needs the "C" (Count your winners and losers) and the "H" (How can I make this hand?).

There are two sure trump losers, a very likely heart loser and two possible club losers.

South's problem is to handle those two club losers and he can do this with proper trump management.

He must find a way to play two rounds of trumps without giving the defense a chance to play a third round.

This isn't too difficult. He simply leads a low trump at trick two. It doesn't matter who wins the trick and what is led back. Suppose East wins and leads back a second club.

South wins and cashes his ace of spades. Then he ruffs a club. Next come three high diamonds from dummy. West can ruff the third or discard. It doesn't matter there is no way to keep South from ruffing his last club with dummy's last trump.

Deadline for fair horses

ANTIOCH — The Contra Costa County Fair Horse Show entry deadline is June 23.

This year's horse show activities begin July 2 and continue through July 4 at the fairgrounds, 10th and L Streets in Antioch.

Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight June 23 in order to escape paying a doubled post entry fee.

The 23rd District Agricultural Association is sponsoring the event.

Limited box stalls for horse show exhibitors are available at the fairgrounds for $20.

Among the 16 horse show divisions in which entries can be made are regular working hunters, green working hunters, preliminary and intermediate jumpers, stock horse, hackamore horses, trail horses, western pleasure and junior mounts.

Since the horse show event has grown so large, it is no longer held simultaneously with other fair activities.

For further information on the horse show, call 757-4400.

Gordon B. Ross

Pleasanton man's new Sandia post

LIVERMORE — Gordon B. Ross of Pleasanton has been promoted to supervisor of the Material Management Division at Sandia Laboratories.

Joining Sandia in Albuquerque, N.M., in 1955, Ross worked in Personnel, Employment, Business Methods and Job Evaluation divisions. In 1968, he transferred to Livermore where he has been personnel representative and PhD recruiting coordinator in the Personnel Division.

For six years, during World War II and the Korean conflict, Ross served as a pilot in the Air Force.

A graduate of New Mexico State University, Ross has done graduate work at the University of New Mexico. He is a member of the Western College Placement Association.

Married, with five grown children, Ross and his wife Nina live on Mirador Drive in Pleasanton.

Consent forms to treat kids

Consent forms allowing doctors to administer medical treatment for persons under the age of 18 are available from Valley Memorial Hospital in Livermore and the Family Medical Center in San Ramon.

The convenient wallet size form gives consent to a physician for all necessary medical care when the parents cannot be reached.

By law, a physician can only administer care in life - threatening emergency situations until a parent's permission can be acquired for further treatment. Frequently, when parents are on vacation and leave their children with a sitter, the hospital has had difficulty locating them in an emergency which is not life - threatening.

Older children should carry the card in their wallet or purse at all times. For younger, children, it may be left with the person in charge. If emergency treatment is needed, the card may be brought with the child to any medical facility.

The form also has space to list allergies, date of last tetanus shot, and insurance information. It must be signed by a parent.
